Authors' biographies

George Bryant was born in 1921 and grew up in a Quechan-speaking family. He attended school on Fort Yuma Reservation and later at the Phoenix Indian School, Yuma High School, and the Sherman Institute. As a young man he enlisted in the United States Marine Corps, serving in combat in the Pacific in World War II and in Korea. Later he was elected to the Quechan Tribal Council, where he was involved in getting the federal government to restore tribal lands and in planning many of the projects that have made the tribe successful today. He is now retired and lives in Yuma, Arizona.

Bryant follows a family tradition of working to preserve the Quechan language. His grandfather, Chappo Bryant, and his father, Michael Bryant, were both involved in linguistics projects with linguist A. M. Halpern in the 1930s. George Bryant has been working with linguist Amy Miller since 1998. He is the primary contributor to the forthcoming Quechan Dictionary, and (along with Barbara Levy, Millie Romero, and Amy Miller) he devoted many years to translating stories for the forthcoming volume Stories from Quechan Oral Literature from the Collection of A. M. Halpern.

Amy Miller earned a PhD in linguistics from the University of California, San Diego, where she studied with Margaret Langdon. She is the author of A Grammar of Jamul Tiipay (2001), co-author of the Barona Inter-Tribal Dictionary (2008), and co-editor of Kar'úk: Native Accounts of the Quechan Mourning Ceremony by A.M. Halpern (1997). She has been studying and documenting Yuman languages since 1984.

Introduction

The Quechan people live along the lower part of the Colorado River in an area which has been their home for a very long time.¹ Traditionally, Quechan territory extended from around Needles, California, to the Gulf of California (Forde 1931:88). Today, the Quechan Indian Nation occupies Fort Yuma Indian Reservation, a portion of their original territory extending along the east side of the river from Winterhaven, California into Yuma, Arizona. Information about traditional Quechan culture may be found in Forde (1931), Bee (1983), and Halpern (1997). Aspects of Quechan history, society, and politics have been discussed by Forbes (1965) and Bee (1981).

The Quechan language, also known as Yuma or Kwatsáan, belongs to the Yuman language family. The Yuman family has three major branches, as diagrammed in Figure 1: River (the branch to which Quechan belongs), Pai, and Delta-California. Kiliwa is regarded as a language isolate within the family.

1 While Bee (1981:viii) points out that Spanish records of the late 17th century are the first to mention the Quechan by name, Stewart (1983:1) cites evidence that their ancestors have lived in the area for at least a millennium.

According to Quechan tradition, the Quechan, Maricopa, Cocopa, and Kumeyaay (whom the Quechan call Kamia) people were created together at the beginning of time.² Eventually they were taken to the sacred mountain 'Avii Kwa'amée (more widely known as Newberry Mountain, located north of Needles, California), where they were taught the proper way to live in the world, and when they came down from this mountain the tribes went their separate ways. The name Quechan makes explicit reference to this traditional history: Quechan is an anglicized spelling of Kwaatsáan, which means 'those who descended'.³ As Mr. Bryant explains in Part III, it is shortened from Xáam Kwaatsáan 'those who descended by means of water',⁴ a name which refers either to the descent of the Quechan people from 'Avii Kwa'amée (Bee 1983:97) or to their subsequent route down the Colorado River to their traditional territory (George Bryant, personal communication).

The creation story is central to Quechan literature and culture. It tells how the people came into existence and explains the origin of their environment and their oldest traditions. It also forms the backdrop against which much of the tribe's extensive oral literature may be understood.

There are almost as many different versions of the Quechan creation story as there are Quechan families. (Different families even have different ways of saying the name of the Creator.)⁵ Different versions reflect different family backgrounds and traditions, and no single version is more legitimate or more "correct" than any other. On the contrary, the variation in its stories adds much to the richness and vibrancy of Quechan literature. For two published views of the Creation which differ from those in this volume, see Wilson (1984) and the film Journey from Spirit Mountain.

This volume presents three views of the origins of the Quechan people. Two are traditional: one is based on a story recorded by anthropologist J.P. Harrington at the beginning of the twentieth century, while the other was researched and recalled by Quechan tribal member George

2 The Mojave and Hualapai, along with the Mexicans and whites, were created shortly thereafter; see Part III of this volume.

3 Kwaatsáan is based on the archaic plural form aatsáan-k 'they descended'; modern plural forms are natsén-k and atsáan-k (the latter with initial a rather than aa).

4 This interpretation assumes that xáam is composed of 'axá 'water' plus instrumental case marker -m; while the loss of the initial syllable is expected, vowel lengthening is not. Under another interpretation, xáam is composed of xáa 'different way, different manner, different direction, etc.' plus instrumental case marker -m, and Xáam Kwaatsáan means 'those who descended a different way'.

5 Mr. Bryant uses two versions of the name of the Creator, Kukwiimáatt and Kukumáatt, interchangeably.

Bryant nearly a hundred years later. These two versions of the creation story complement one another and together provide a richer and more comprehensive account of the origins of the Quechan people than could either version on its own.⁶ The third narrative provides a bridge between traditional creation stories and today's world. It is based loosely on the modern scientific view of a migration across the Bering Strait, yet it also describes how various Yuman tribes came to settle in their traditional locations and how they got their names, and in this way it serves as a sequel to the traditional stories in Parts II and III.

This volume does not reveal any tribal secrets; rather, it restores to its original language a story which has been in print in English for over a hundred years. It is presented here in a bilingual format which we hope will be useful to fluent speakers, language learners, and English speakers alike. The sections below explain exactly how the restoration was done.

A Quechan Account of Origins

An early account of the Quechan creation, entitled "A Yuma Account of Origins," was published in English by anthropologist John Peabody Harrington in 1908. Harrington learned the story from a Quechan man named Joe Homer. Homer was born sometime in the early 1860s and acquired his knowledge of the creation in the traditional Quechan way: through dreaming.⁷

Dreaming holds a central place in traditional Quechan culture and religion. "Every individual 'can dream vivid dreams'," writes Harrington (1908:326), "and whatever is dreamed is believed either to have once happened or to be about to happen. Only a few men, however, dream proficiently and professionally." These powerful few have the ability to visit the mythic past of the Quechan—and in particular the scene of the creation—in dreams.

Joe Homer told Harrington:

I was present from the very beginning, and saw and heard all. I dreamed a little of it at a time. I would then tell it to my friends. The old men would 6 The reader is encouraged to consult the Mojave creation story (one version of which was documented in English by Kroeber 1948, 1972) and that of the Maricopa (one version of which was documented by Spier 1933:345ff). Both of these are clearly related to, yet quite different from, Quechan versions of the creation story.

7 We infer this Homer's approximate date of birth from Harrington's (1908:326) statement that Homer was "about forty-five years old" at the time of publication.

say, "That is right! I was there and heard it myself." Or they would say, "You have dreamed poorly. That is not right." And they would tell me right. So at last I learned the whole of it right. [Joe Homer, quoted by Harrington 1908:327]

His version of the creation story has thus been corroborated and in some places amended by his contemporaries.

While the full version of the creation myth is traditionally told over the course of four nights, the English version published by Harrington is packed into twenty pages of scholarly prose, and we may conclude that it has been very tightly condensed. It was, however, "carefully revised by the narrator himself," according to Harrington (1908:326).

In June, 2003, George Bryant and I studied "A Yuma Account of Origins" and agreed that the story should be restored to its original language. Mr. Bryant began then and there the lengthy process of retelling it in Quechan. During the first two sessions, I transcribed his narration by hand. Thereafter Mr. Bryant consented to have the story recorded, and we recorded two sessions in September and two more in November, 2003. After retelling the story to its end, Mr. Bryant returned to the beginning of the story and retold it for a second time, for the purpose of recording. As a result the entire story is now recorded on tape. It is approximately six hours in duration. Mr. Bryant's retelling is entitled "A Quechan Account of Origins."

The Quechan Legend of the Creation

Mr. Bryant grew up "in between" cultures and considers himself fortunate to have experienced both traditional Quechan and modern American ways of life. As a child, he listened to tribal elders telling the creation story. No two narrations were quite the same, and he found each version to be useful for filling in gaps left by the others. As an adult, he researched English-language written versions of the story and found greater differences. "They didn't know too much English back then," he explains, and with regard to some details, "the interpreters didn't know how to put it right."

Mr. Bryant eventually synthesized his childhood memories and the results of his research in an article entitled "The Kwatsan Legend of the Creation", which appeared as a three-part series in the Quechan Newsletter in 1995. His work provides a different perspective and a bit more information about the early events of the Creation than does Harrington's.

Mr. Bryant retold his version of the creation story in the Quechan language on January 27, 2004, using a draft of “The Quechan Legend of the Creation” as a guide. His narration is approximately 62 minutes in duration.

The Migration of the Yuman Tribes

The modern age has a different view of how Native Americans came to populate the New World. “The Migration of the Yuman Tribes” presents Mr. Bryant’s personal view of the origins of the Quechan people. Incorporating modern scientific information, it begins with the migration of people across the Bering Strait from Asia to North America. It then describes how the ancestors of the Yuman people traveled through the continent, dividing themselves into groups and eventually settling in what became their homelands. This portion of the narrative, which also explains how the tribes got their names, makes a fitting conclusion to traditional Creation stories as well as to the modern account.

“The Migration of the Tribes” is a spontaneous original narrative, notable for the ease and fluency with which it was told. George Bryant narrated “The Migration of the Yuman Tribes” in the Quechan language on April 1, 2004. This narration is approximately 15 minutes long.

From English to Quechan

We began with the intention of translating the narratives of Harrington (1908) and Bryant (1995) back into Quechan. We soon found that converting an English-language narrative into idiomatic Quechan is no simple task. It requires not just the translation of words and sentences but extensive restructuring at the levels of syntax, rhetorical structure, and local organization. It also typically involves the elaboration and expansion of material in order to express detail at the level considered appropriate in idiomatic Quechan and the re-creation of conversations that are merely summarized in the English version. In short, it amounts to retelling the story in Quechan using the English version as a guide.

Mr. Bryant has the remarkable ability to do all this simultaneously, if slowly and thoughtfully, in his head, producing idiomatic Quechan as the result. After a brief study of Harrington’s “A Yuma Account of Origins”, he used Harrington’s English text as a guide, restructured and reorganized its ideas, and restated them in Quechan at the appropriate level of detail.

He did the same for “The Quechan Legend of the Creation”. His Quechan renditions of these stories retain all the content of the English originals but differ from them in syntax, rhetorical structure, local organization, and level of detail. The reader who compares the line-by-line English versions presented here to the English versions published by Harrington (1908) and Bryant (1995) will immediately appreciate these differences. For example, where Harrington writes, “In vain the wicked besought Kwikumát to let them in. Most of them were drowned,” Mr. Bryant elaborates:

Piipáa 'atsláytsəts mata'ár oov'ótsk,
 nyáanyi,
 Kukwiimáatt kwakyáavək:
 “ 'Aakxáwapátəlyá!”
 a'íik 'et.
 “Kaváarək,” a'íim,
 avoonóok 'eta.
 'Atáytanək,
 'axály oopóoyk 'et.

We translate this as:

*The bad people stood outside,
 and at that point,
 they asked Kukwiimáatt a favor:
 “We want to come in too!”
 they said, they say.
 “No,” he said,
 and they were moving about there, they say.
 There were a whole lot of them,
 and they drowned, they say.*

In re-telling this episode, Mr. Bryant expands and restructures the narrative to reflect the chronological order of events. He re-creates a conversation to which Harrington only alludes. And—by invention or memory—he supplies subtle details which Harrington omits but which are necessary in Quechan storytelling: what the people are doing and how they are oriented before Kukwiimáatt’s decision (mata'ár oov'ótsk) and after the decision (avoonóok), and the number of people who are affected ('atáyk).

Where Harrington writes, “Lizard (Kwaatuly) lighted a wisp of arrowweed. He lighted the southeast corner of the pyre first, and last of all the southwest corner,” Mr. Bryant’s re-telling is rich in traditional Quechan rhetorical devices including repetition, syntactic parallelism, and the iconic use of narrative time to mirror the duration of an event:

Kwaatúuly,
nyáanyi 'eethóo atháwk,
awíim,
taráat,
'a'áw aatapályək.
'A'áw aatapályəm aráak.
Ayáak,
nyaayáak,
kavéely,
kavéely athúum,
nyáavik athúum,
kwaaxwírnyi,
nyáany xiipúk aatapályk.
Viiwáamk,
viiwáamk,
aakwíink,
kwaaxwírnyi aakwíink,
viiwáanyək,
kavéely,
kavéely 'anyaaxáap kamémt.
Awíntik,
tarántik.

We translate this as:

*As for Kwatúuly (Chuckwalla), at that point he got some willow,
and so,
he set it on fire,
he lit a fire.
He lit a fire and it blazed up.
He went along,
and as he went along,*

*in the south,
it was in the south,
it was over here,
in the corner,
that was the first place he lit.
He went along,
he went along,
and he turned,
he turned the corner there,
and he went along,
and in the south,
he brought it into the southwest.
He did it again as he had done before,
he set it on fire again as he had done before.*

Finally, consider the following passage from Bryant (1995): “While traveling toward the top he opened his eyes in spite of what some strange sense perception had warned him as it did previously to Kukwimat but since Asakwimat did not heed the warning he was blinded by the waters that filled his eyes.” Mr. Bryant retells this passage in Quechan as:

Viiyáak,
viiyáaxaym,
'atsaayúu nyiuukanáavək 'etá.
Xiipúk Kukwiimáatt uu'ítsənya,
nyáany uukanáavəntík 'etá.
Avathúum:
nyáanya uukuunáavnya makyík a'av aly'émk,
makyík athúu lya'émk,
athóxaym,
'atsaayúu,
'aayúu,
'axám áamk viiyáaxayk,
viiyáany,
uutstáaqtəəm athúum,
'axányts alyaxávək,
eethónyily.

Eethó kwa'ura'úur alyaxávæk athúum,
 nyáanyəm,
 nyaanyiimánk,
 'atsaayúulya'émk 'etá.
 Eethóts tár 'ím.

In the retelling, Mr. Bryant once again restructures the narrative by reporting events in the order in which they occurred. He expands on the information presented in the original English version by making liberal use of repetition, paraphrase, and syntactic parallelism. As a result, the Quechan-language retelling brings to the foreground—and causes the listener or reader to spend some time considering—each of the events which make up this portion of the narrative. We translate the Quechan version as:

*He went along,
 he went along, and suddenly,
 he was told things, they say.
 Whatever had been said first to Kukwiimáatt,
 that's what was said to him too, they say.
 This (is what) happened:
 he did not listen at all to what was said to him,
 not at all,
 and suddenly,
 well,
 well,
 he was swimming along, and suddenly,
 he was going along,
 and he opened (his eyes),
 and the water went in,
 into his eyes.
 It went into his eyeballs, and so,
 at that point,
 from then on,
 he couldn't see anything, they say.
 He was blind.*

From recording to manuscript

I listened carefully and repeatedly to the recordings of Mr. Bryant retelling the two stories, and transcribed them verbatim. I divided the text into lines motivated by prosodic criteria, including melody, rhythm, and pauses, outlined in Miller (1997). Then, using Harrington (1908) and Bryant (1995) for reference, I gave each line of Quechan text a coherent English translation.

My primary goal in translating was to convey in English the intended meaning of each prosodic line of Quechan. In some cases it was necessary to add lexical information to an English line so that information conveyed either implicitly or grammatically in the Quechan line would not be lost. For instance, since English lacks a switch-reference system, it was sometimes necessary to add a noun phrase to the translation to help the reader keep track of reference. Since English lacks overt case markers for lexical noun phrases, it was sometimes necessary to add a verb to the translation of a line consisting solely of a postposed noun phrase in order to clarify that noun phrase's function. Added information appears in parentheses.

There are several reasons for translating at the level of the prosodic line: First, I hope to capture in the English translation as much as possible of the rhetorical structure and local organization of the Quechan version. Second, I hope to influence the reader's pace, encouraging him or her to give due attention to each idea that is expressed as the story unfolds. Finally, I hope that an English key to small units of Quechan language will be useful to the language learner.

Mr. Bryant and I spent many weeks reviewing the transcripts and translations of the tapes. Mr. Bryant considered each line carefully and pointed out ways in which it might be improved. His corrections to the English translations have been incorporated into the finished product. Of the numerous corrections to the Quechan transcript which he suggested, those which clarify the structure or meaning of the narrative, as well as those which seemed particularly important to Mr. Bryant, have been incorporated into the text. As a result, there are now minor discrepancies between the Quechan version as it appears here and that which is heard on the tape. Each such discrepancy is explained in notes at the end of the volume. Corrections involving matters of style—many of them intended to make the Quechan narrative sound appropriately formal—are documented in the endnotes, but in order to minimize discrepancies between the tape and the transcript they have not been incorporated into the text.

A few general observations are noted here, once and for all: First, like most speakers, Mr. Bryant frequently uses the short variants 'ím, 'ét or 'et, and 'ityá of suffixed forms of the auxiliary verb a'íim 'to say' to convey quotative mood. In formal speech these short forms would be replaced with the corresponding long forms a'ím, a'ét, and a'ityá. Second, the word 'atsaayúu (along with its variants 'aayúu and nyaayúu) literally means 'thing'. In discourse, 'atsaayúu and its variants are often used as hesitation words, holding the floor for the speaker while he decides how best to express his next idea, and under such circumstances they are translated with the English hesitation word well. Mr. Bryant would like the literal meaning 'thing' always to be kept in mind. Finally, certain auxiliary verbs are often used as clause-linking devices, and in this use they are best translated into English as conjunctions; for further discussion see Miller (1993).

Alphabet

The Quechan language is written phonemically, using a practical orthography:

Vowels:

á, à	like the a in about .
aa	a longer sound, like the a in father .
e	like the e in pet .
ee	the same sound, only held for a longer time. In certain contexts (for example, following th , sh , or ny), ee is lowered and sounds almost like the a in mad , only held for a longer time.
i	like the i in pit .
ii	like the i in machine , only held for a longer time.
o	like the o in pot .
oo	the same sound, only held for a longer time.
u	like the u in put .
uu	like the u in rule , only held for a longer time.

- a this a, written without an accent, represents “schwa,” a special vowel whose pronunciation depends upon the sounds which surround it, as discussed below, and which may disappear or be relocated when prefixes are added to the word.
- ə this vowel represents schwa in post-stress position, where it sounds like the e in government.

Consonants:

- k like the k in sky.
- kw the same sound, but made with rounded lips. It sounds like the kw in backward.
- ky like the ky in backyard.
- l like the l in freely.
- lly to make this sound, put your tongue in position to say ly, then blow air out so that it goes around the sides of your tongue.
- ly like the lli in million. This sound is made with the tip of the tongue touching the lower teeth.
- m like the m in mom.
- n like Spanish n, as in bonito.
- ng like the ng in sing. This sound is found in few spoken words but many song words.
- ny like the ny in canyon.
- p like the p in spin.
- q a sound similar to k but pronounced farther back in the mouth.
- qw the same sound, but made with rounded lips.
- r a tapped or slightly trilled r, similar to the r in the Spanish pronunciation of María.
- s like Spanish s, as in peso.
- sh this is not like English sh; instead, it is a whistling sound made with the tip of the tongue at the roots of the teeth and slightly curled back.
- t like Spanish t, as in bonito. Made with the tongue touching the upper front teeth, or even between the front teeth.
- th like the th in this.
- ts like the ts in lots.

tt	like English t , as in stun . Made with the tongue touching the roots of the upper front teeth.
ty	like the ty in the expression got ya!
v	like the v in very .
w	like the w in wet .
x	like the ch in German ach , or like Spanish j as in jota .
xw	the same sound, but made with rounded lips.
y	like the y in yes .
'	this sound, known as “glottal stop”, is actually a brief period of silence made by closing the vocal cords. It is found in the English expressions uh-uh and uh-oh .

Pronunciation tips: For many speakers, particularly those of the older generation, a vowel which begins a word is preceded by aspiration (a puff of air which some people think of as “a little h”). Aspiration disappears when the word is prefixed; for instance, while aspiration may be heard at the beginning of av’áak ‘he walked’, it is not heard in nyaav’áak ‘when he walked’.

The vowels á and à are pronounced like the a in about. Unaccented a, on the other hand, represents an inorganic vowel known in the Yuman literature as “schwa,” and its pronunciation depends upon the sounds that surround it. For instance, when followed by y or between palatal consonants, unaccented a may be pronounced like the i in pit; when followed by w it may be pronounced like the u in put. Unaccented a may disappear or be relocated when a prefix is added to the word. A sequence of kw followed by unaccented a may be pronounced either kwa or, in casual speech, ku.

When a stressed vowel is followed by y or w, the sounds are pronounced sequentially; they are not combined using English conventions. When pronouncing the sequence áy, for instance, one first pronounces the aa sound (like the a in father) then pronounces the y sound (as in yes). When pronouncing the sequence éw, one first pronounces the e (like the e in pet) and then the w (as in wet).

Grammar

The grammar of Quechan is highly complex. A detailed description may be found in Halpern (1946, 1947) and a brief update in Miller (1997:25-32). The reader is encouraged to consult these sources. To provide some idea of the extent to which Quechan differs from English, we mention here just a few of the most basic facts about the language.

The basic word order is SUBJECT-OBJECT-VERB. Noun phrases are frequently omitted if their referents are understood. Sometimes a noun phrase is placed at the end of a sentence as an afterthought. A case marker indicates the function of the noun phrase in the sentence.

Pronouns typically take the form of prefixes on the verb. There are also independent words for 'I', 'me', 'you', 'we', and 'us', but these are used primarily for emphasis.

Plurals and nominalizations may be formed from basic verb stems in various complicated ways which include prefixation, suffixation, and changes in the length and/or quality of the stressed vowel. Many verbs have two plural forms: a collective/dual form and a distributive/multiple form. The use of plural forms is optional, except in the case of motion verbs and auxiliaries, where it is obligatory.

While verb tenses are important in English, aspect and mood are important in Quechan. Progressive aspect is indicated by auxiliary verb constructions, and notions such as repetition, limited or interrupted duration, and sequentiality may be marked by suffixes on the verb. Irrealis mood (which indicates that an event has never or not yet taken place) is marked by means of a suffix on the verb, as are most other moods including optative, interrogative, and dubitative. Quotative mood is indicated by an auxiliary verb construction and imperative mood by a verbal prefix which fits into the same paradigm as the personal pronominal prefixes.

Clauses are often linked together in long chains. A switch reference marker which follows the verb tells whether its subject is the same as or different from the subject of the following verb.

Conventions

The following conventions are used in this volume:

- The text is divided into lines based on the prosodic characteristics (such as melody, rhythm, and pause) of the Quechan version. Where narration was halting or interrupted, syntactic criteria and Mr. Bryant's judgment were used to determine line breaks.
- If a prosodic line is too long to fit within a single graphic line, it is continued on a second graphic line. The second graphic line is indented slightly. The translation of a prosodic line may also be spread over two graphic lines.

- Each prosodic line of Quechan is given a coherent translation in the facing column. To use the English translation as a key to the meaning of its Quechan counterpart, compare a complete English line (which begins flush with the center margin and may wrap onto a second, indented graphic line) with a complete Quechan prosodic line (which begins flush with the left margin and may wrap onto a second, indented graphic line).
- The text is divided into paragraphs on the basis of prosodic characteristics (such as melody and pause) of the Quechan version. Where narration was halting or interrupted, thematic criteria and Mr. Bryant's judgment were used to determine paragraph breaks. Prosodic paragraphs (and some thematic paragraphs) are separated by blank lines.
- A series of three asterisks indicates that an interruption has taken place or material has been omitted.
- When t or tt (each of which represents a distinct sound, as described above) is followed by t, th, ts, tt, or ty, a hyphen is used to separate the relevant symbols.

 they were the same too;
 the place where they settled,
 they liked it, they say.
 They did.
 That (place).
 They settled there,

*They would climb (back) up.
 When they climbed up again,
 to that distant place,
 they got there,
 people they called relatives were there,
 and they saw them,
 and so,
 they told them about it,
 there they were,
 and then,
 they came this way,
 they came down here,
 they came this way, until —
 they came this way, until they got here.
 They in turn saw the people that were

 It happened, and so,
 that's what happened.
 The ones who had settled there came down, they say,
 the Xáam Kwaatsáan, (Those Who Came Down by Means of Water).
 The Xáam Kwaatsáan, they say.
 They are called Quechan,
 nowadays.
 But
 they came down from that distant (place), and they lived somewhere (in that area) too,
 they settled there,
 and (other people) saw that,
 and they called them (by that name),
 they say.

The people did that.
 They came down by means of water,⁷⁸³
 and, well,
 at that (place),
 they were living there;
 “We will live here,” they said.
 “Here we are,
 we are the ones.”

 all of them,
 they are related to each other, they say.
 So,
 it's still the same, but they have been there for a long time,
 and so,
 that's it,
 that's what they say,
 they have always explained it (in that way).
 You never hear (the story) any more,
 it's gone,
 but
 it happened that way,
 it did happen that way.
 That's all.*

Notes

- 1 A false start is heard here: 'Amattáam nya—nyakór. The term 'false start' refers to an interruption in the flow of speech after which the speaker restarts and usually rephrases his utterance. False starts occur frequently in natural speech and indicate that the speaker is thinking and formulating his utterance while he speaks. They are noted here in order to account for minor discrepancies between the spoken and written versions of the narrative.
- 2 A false start is heard here: *thóm—iimáatt-ts thómayúuv aly'é*m.
- 3 'Ashútsíi was changed to 'ashútsáa upon review.
- 4 'Antséníi was changed to 'antsénaa upon review.
- 5 Mr. Bryant suggests kaa'its nyáany lyavíim a'ét as an alternative formulation of this line.

- 94 Shiimúly was changed to shiimúlyts upon review.
- 95 Mat'á is heard in the recording with a long vowel—Mat'áa; it was changed on review.
- 96 At this point the text has been revised considerably in order to clarify matters of fact. Fourteen lines have been deleted and replaced with ten new lines which Mr. Bryant composed upon review.
- 97 This is the last line of the revision mentioned in note 96. Henceforth the text follows the the recoring.
- 98 The word a'ím 'they were called' was inserted upon review.
- 99 A false start is heard here: xan'aapuk—xan'aapúuk 'íkəm.
- 100 This line literally means 'snakes were like that, they say'.
- 101 Nyáany was changed to nyáanyts upon review.
- 102 This line is heard in the recording as 'avé 'atskwatsakýíwəny; it was changed upon review.

- 103 This line is heard in the recording as 'aayúu matxávil xwérər awétk; the word atáp 'he threw him' was added upon review.
- 104 This line was added upon review.
- 105 Upon review, Mr. Bryant suggests xáam uuthúutsk athúuk 'éta 'they are different kinds, they say' as an alternative formulation of this line.
- 106 This line is heard in the recording as nyaanyiimánk awím; it was corrected upon review.
- 107 A false start is heard here: xuumáar nyii—nyiivasháwk uuváaxaym.
- 108 A false start is heard here: 'atsaayúu 'aave kwa'ats—kwa'atsláytsəny nyii'aqáasəm.
- 109 Several lines of false starts are heard in the recording but are omitted here.
- 110 A false start is heard here: nyaa—nyaa'aláaytanəm.
- 111 Mr. Bryant suggests changing this and the preceding line to xuumáyts athútyá, nyáany xuumáyts athúuk a'ét 'he was his son, he was his son, they say'.
- 112 A false start is heard here: saa—xatsúurək nyiináamk viitháwm.
- 113 'Avuuyáanyi was changed to 'avuuyáany upon review.

- 240 A false start is heard in this line: 'atsaayúu sha—shakw'iláa atséwk 'et.
- 241 A'ím 'he said' was corrected to awíim 'he did' upon review.
- 242 'Oowéxa was changed to 'oowéxənya upon review.
- 243 Nyoo'éey was corrected to nyoo'éeyxa upon review.
- 244 Mr. Bryant suggests nyáany 'anymawéeyk mawéxa 'you will do that for me' as an alternative formulation of this line.
- 245 Alya'ém is just barely audible.

- 246 Eethó ‘eyes’ was changed to meethó ‘your eyes’ upon review. A false start is heard in this line.
- 247 A false start is heard here: 'axányənyts takavék ats—atsénk.
- 248 Mr. Bryant suggests nyíiv'óowk a'ét ‘they stood there, they say’ as an alternative formulation of this line.
- 249 A false start is heard here: nyaa'awém—makyík nyuu'áav aly'émk.
- 250 This line literally means ‘he walked, he came, and he went, they say’.
- 251 False starts are heard in two places 'avá kw—'avá kwatiinyáamənya 'atséwx—'atséwxa.
- 252 A false start is heard here: ii—iimaatk uuthúik.
- 253 A false start in English, little red—, and a line in Quechan, xóo ‘or’, are omitted here.
- 254 Xanapúuk is Mr. Bryant’s interpretation of the word xanapúk which Harrington cites at this point in the story. In fact, xanapúuk does not mean ‘piss ant’ but instead is variant of xan'aapúuk ‘water snake’. The word for ‘piss ant’ is unknown.
- 255 Mr. Bryant suggests replacing this and the preceding line with a single line: 'ax'áa kaayúməxáyk ‘he had no cottonwood yet’.
- 256 This line literally means ‘he never asked for anything’. Upon review, Mr. Bryant suggested makyík awíktə a'ím kwakyáav aly'émk 'eta ‘he never asked for them to help him, they say’ as an alternative.
- 257 Mr. Bryant suggests nyáanya piipáats athúuk a'ét ‘that was a person, they say’ as an alternative formulation of this line.
- 258 Nyíitaxrámpk was changed to alytaxrámpk upon review.
- 259 This line is heard as makyík shalyamák kwatháwnya nyav'áa lya'éŋ; it was changed upon review.
- 260 The narrative is briefly interrupted at this point.
- 261 There is a brief digression into English at this point.
- 262 Kaawíts kwa'anyáaw literally means ‘things which are hidden’.
- 263 False starts are heard here: 'anyáats—oh—máanyts—'atsaya—piipáa Kwatsáanənya matsúyly 'aaly'éta. Mr. Bryant suggests changing 'aaly'éta to 'aaly'étkə; the significance of the change is not clear.
- 264 A false start is heard here: nya'ootséwxənya—'ootséwxáyənya.
- 265 A false start is heard here: makyík pa'iipáa kuukanáav aly'éŋ—alyka'émk.
- 266 After two more lines (which have been omitted here), the tape comes to an end.
- 267 Mr. Bryant suggests amúly áayk 'et ‘he gave her a name, they say’ as an alternative formulation of this line.
- 268 A false start is heard here: xuumáyts—xuumáyts athúuk 'et.
- 269 Kumastamxó was changed to Kumastamxóts upon review.
- 270 Mr. Bryant suggests 'anyáyənya 'amáynyi atséwətk awityá ‘he made light in the sky’ as an alternative formulation.
- 271 This line literally means ‘Marxókavék made the thing, the sun, give off light’.
- 272 A false start is heard here: makyík 'ats—eethóny ta'axótt aly'émxá.
- 273 Two lines consisting of false starts are omitted here.
- 274 Kawíya uu'íts [pause] nyaawíim was replaced with Kawíya uu'ítsnya awíim upon review.
- 275 Mr. Bryant suggests awíntik avoonóowú nyaa'íim ‘if he is going to do it again’ as an alternative formulation of this line.

- 276 This line literally means ‘if he goes on doing it again’.
- 277 This line is hard to hear; it was clarified upon review.
- 278 A false start is heard here: 'aayúu tsámaly masheethée—masheethéevət.
- 279 A false start is heard here: Kukumáatt-ts 'avá kwanyúilya—kwatiinyámənya alyavák siivát.
- 280 A false start is heard here: 'aayúu kaawíts tsuu—aatspáatsk oov'óts 'ím.
- 281 Mr. Bryant suggests replacing taaxán with taaxánk.
- 282 This line is heard as piipáa kwashúntənyts shtuutúutk 'etəma ‘each person got (something)’; the phrase 'a'í 'ashéntəm ‘one stick’ was added upon review.
- 283 Kumastamxó was changed to Kumastamxóts upon review.
- 284 Three lines consisting of false starts are omitted here.
- 285 As recorded, the word for ‘prickly pear’ sounds like 'aa'áa; it was corrected to 'a'á upon review.
- 286 A false start is heard here: nyáanya Xattpáa Nya—'Anyáa nyiiáayk 'et.
- 287 This line literally means ‘to the one Maricopa’.
- 288 Mr. Bryant suggests nyáany nyii'áayk 'eta ‘I give that to them, he said’ as an alternative formulation of this line.
- 289 Mr. Bryant suggests 'anyáats 'awéxa as an alternative formulation of this line. As it stands in the text, the line gets its unrealis interpretation from the suffix -xa which appears two lines hence.
- 290 Nyaayúum was changed to nyaayúu in this and the following line upon review.
- 291 Several lines consisting of false starts are omitted here.
- 292 Mr. Bryant suggests pa'ípáats athíts 'amátt arún awú nyaa'ím as an alternative formulation of this line.
- 293 The November 10, 2003 recording session ends here.
- 294 Nyáanyəm a'ím was changed to nyaa'ím upon review.
- 295 False starts are heard here: makyík—makyí 'anyáay—makyí avá lya'émxá.
- 296 This line literally means ‘he did it and made it, they say’.
- 297 A false start is heard here: Kukwiimáatt-ts nya—'amátt ka'ák aatsuumpápk 'et.
- 298 A false start is heard here: Kumastamxóts 'avá—'avá tiinyámənya alyuuváak. Tiinyámənya was changed to kwatiinyámənya upon review.

- 301 A false start is heard here: axtalwé—xatalwényənyts a'ím.
- 302 'Axály Mattnyakótt and 'Axály Mattnyakót are alternative forms (one with dental t, one with alveolar tt) of the same name. Mr. Bryant is not sure which is correct.
- 303 A false start is heard here: Shakílykily Kamáa—Nyamáa vaa'ét.
- 304 Mr. Bryant suggests replacing this line with nyáanyəm tsaqwérək a'éta ‘at that point he spoke, they say’.
- 305 This line is heard as Nyáany 'amáyənyí a'ím 'ityá; it was changed upon review.
- 306 A false start is heard here: ooshétsənyts 'í—'Aqáaq a'ét.
- 307 The distributive plural form uuthúuts implies that each feather became something different: a different species of bird, Mr. Bryant explains.
- 308 Kumastamxó was changed to Kumastamxóts upon review.
- 309 This line is heard as 'axáts aví veeyəmxaym ‘the water went away from here, and suddenly’. It was changed upon review.

- 310 A false start is heard here: 'amány—'amányəm áamk athúuk 'etəma.
- 311 A false start is heard here: nyii—nyiiivátəm athúum.
- 312 This line is heard as takavék ookavék athúum 'he went back, he brought it back'; it was changed upon review.

- 327 Mr. Bryant suggests uu'ítsk a'éta 'they said, they say' as an alternative formulation of this line.
- 328 At this point in Harrington's (1908) narrative, a passage in Latin describes how children are conceived. We have omitted this passage.
- 329 The word 'anyép 'my' was added upon review. Even with this addition the syntax of the line remains uncertain; Mr. Bryant also suggests máany nyaxuumáyts nyaathúuva 'you are my son' as an alternative formulation.
- 330 This line is heard as nya'axuumáyk 'ityá, but Mr. Bryant firmly corrected it to nyaxuumáyk 'ityá upon review. He proposes 'anyáats nyaxuumáyk 'athutyá 'I call you son' as an alternative formulation.
- 331 Matxányanys 'the wind (subject case)' was replaced with matxánya 'the wind (object form)' upon review.
- 332 This line is heard as makyík veeyém aly'ém; it was changed upon review. Mr. Bryant suggests tsayém 'ínyək kaváarək 'he tried to loosen it but it didn't happen' or tsayém 'ínyək nyeekwévək 'he tried to loosen it but it was no good' as possible alternative formulations.
- 333 A false start is heard here: maa—kwakapáarnyi atsáam.
- 334 An indecipherable line is omitted here.
- 335 This line is heard as nyamadap mapúyxa 'aaly'étk 'I think you will die'. It was changed upon review.
- 336 This line literally means 'he will not die'.
- 337 This line literally means 'the snake caused its rattles or something to make noise, they say'.
- 338 This and the following line literally mean 'and they reappeared. He wanted them to reappear'.
- 339 This line is heard as kúurtan nyaawím. It was changed upon review.

- 340 A false start is heard here: max—nyaa—maxák kayámk viiyáanyák.
- 341 As mentioned in the Introduction, when this project was begun, narration was at first transcribed by hand. After two days of work, Mr. Bryant consented to have the story recorded, and Tape 1 commences at the point in the narrative marked by this note. The reader is advised that from this point forward, the narrative represents Mr. Bryant's early efforts at retelling the Creation story, and it accurately reflects the difficulty of the task. Between this point and the point marked by note 359, Mr. Bryant's retelling of "A Yuma Account of Origins" was formulated one line (or, in some cases, one sentence) at a time rather continuously, and, as is entirely natural under the circumstances, is characterized by false starts and rephrasings and is punctuated after almost every line with discussion of how the events reported in the turgid prose of Harrington (1908) might best be retold in the Quechan language. To avoid an unmanageable proliferation of endnotes, the many false starts, rephrasings, and discussions in this portion of the narrative are noted here once and for all. By the time he reaches the point in the narrative marked by note 359, Mr. Bryant has become a master of the difficult task of retelling, and the narrative proceeds in a relatively continuous manner from there forward.
- After retelling the Creation story to the end, Mr. Bryant graciously retold the early portion for a second time for the purpose of recording. The material that precedes the point in the narrative marked by this note thus represents his later work and is (for the most part) continuous narration.
- 342 This line is heard as máanyts 'atsnyamarávəm; the word miiwám was added upon review.
- 343 Alyaaakxávək was changed to alyaatsakxávək 'et at the time of recording.
- 344 This line is pieced together from discussion.

He identifies it as "several pinnacles ... some two miles or so from the Colorado River in the flat-bottomed wash up Eldorado Canyon, a tributary arroyo from the west, perhaps 25 miles below Hoover Dam" and notes that "[a]fter [the Creator's] death, Mastamho made the river to wash away his house, ashes, and bones". According to the Maricopa creation story (Spier 1933:352), "[a]fter the culture hero was cremated, the people were thirsty. They thrust a staff into the ground, so that a spring was formed. This is the source of the Colorado River. This was done in the center of their house. The house posts were still standing when the first whites came. They cut them down, but the rocks are still there to show the location. The name of these posts is axavúpo, 'water post'."

At Open Book Publishers, we are changing the nature of the traditional academic book. The title you have just read will not be left on a library shelf, but will be accessed online by hundreds of readers each month across the globe. We make all our books free to read online so that students, researchers and interested readers who can't afford a printed edition can still have access to the same ideas as you.

Our digital publishing model also allows us to produce online supplementary material, including extra chapters, reviews, links and other digital resources. Find Xiipúktan on our website to access its online extras. Please check this page regularly for ongoing updates, and join the conversation by leaving your own comments: <http://www.openbookpublishers.com/isbn/9781909254404>

If you enjoyed this book, and feel that research like this should be available to all readers, regardless of their income, please think about donating to us. Our company is run entirely by academics, and our publishing decisions are based on intellectual merit and public value rather than on commercial viability. We do not operate for profit and all donations, as with all other revenue we generate, will be used to finance new Open Access publications.

The World Oral Literature Project is an urgent global initiative to document and disseminate endangered oral literatures before they disappear without record. Our website houses collections of recordings of oral literature, free-to-download publications of documentation theory and practice, and links to resources and funding for oral tradition fieldwork and archiving: <http://www.oralliterature.org>

In partnership with Open Book Publishers, the World Oral Literature Project has launched a book series on oral literature. The series preserves and promotes the oral literatures of indigenous people by publishing materials on endangered traditions in innovative ways.

Xiipúktan (First of All):

Three Views of the Origins of the Quechan People

By George Bryant

Linguistic work by Amy Miller

The Quechan people live along the lower part of the Colorado River in the United States. According to tradition, the Quechan and other Yuman people were created at the beginning of time, and their Creation story explains how they came into existence, the origin of their environment, and the significance of their oldest traditions. The Creation story forms the backdrop against which much of the tribe's extensive oral literature may be understood.

At one time there were almost as many different versions of the creation story as there were Quechan families. Today few people remember having heard the story told. This volume, presented in the Quechan language with facing-column English translation, provides three views of the origins of the Quechan people. One narrative synthesizes George Bryant's childhood memories and his later research. Another is based upon J.P. Harrington's 'A Yuma Account of Origins' (1908). The third provides a modern view of the origins of the Quechan, beginning with the migration from Asia to the New World and ending with the settlement of the Yuman tribes at their present locations.

This collection is for the Quechan people and will also interest linguists, anthropologists, oral literature specialists, and anyone interested in Native American culture.

This book is part of the World Oral Literature Series, developed in conjunction with the World Oral Literature Project. As with all Open Book publications, the entire work is available to read for free online, while printable digital editions of the volume can be downloaded from the publisher's website:
