Introduction

The Finspong collection (Finspongssamlingen), kept in the Norrköping City Library, constitutes one of the largest historical book collections in Sweden, comprising about 35,000 volumes.¹ It includes a considerable amount of music: about ninety printed publications and thirty music manuscripts, almost all collections of multiple pieces, dating from 1600 to the late nineteenth century. Many of the pieces included in the manuscript volumes are known to have survived only there and more than a fifth of the printed publications are seemingly unica. The manuscripts and printed publications, as well as the repertoire included in them, have varied origins, such as France, the Southern Netherlands, the Dutch Republic, northern German-speaking regions and Scandinavia. This international character of the collection can provide a point of departure for studies addressing issues related to, for example, music transfer and different ways of adaptation of the music to a local context. In addition, the music in the Finspong collection constitutes a rare example of a music collection accumulated by the same aristocratic family over a period of almost three centuries, reflecting shifting tastes and preferences over time.

Although the Finspong collection contains one of the more comprehensive historical music collections surviving in Sweden, it has been without a modern catalogue. This can be compared to contemporary Swedish music collections, such as the Gimo collection, the Leufstabruk collection, or the Düben collection, all of which have modern catalogues.² The aim of this publication is thus to present a modern and detailed catalogue with a focus on the material – the printed and handwritten sources, as well as the musical repertoire they include in order to facilitate further studies of this music material.³ The book also deals with issues related to ownership of the musical items and provides an attempt to produce a chronological reconstruction of the accumulation of the music in the collection.

The introduction covers first the history of the family De Geer in Sweden at Finspång and the history of its library. Second, a chronological outline of the acquisition of the music is presented. A third part examines the musical items divided in two groups: printed publications and music manuscripts. The final part of the introduction discusses the music repertoire, focussing on issues such as geographical origin and the different repertoires of secular and sacred music.

The De Geer Family and the Library at Finspång

In 1618, the Dutch entrepreneur Louis De Geer I (1587–1652) started running the Finspång estate and industries outside Norrköping, leasing the property from the Swedish king.⁴ Twenty-three years later, in 1641, Louis De Geer purchased Finspång for a sum of over 50,000 Riksdaler. At this point, Finpong included a manor house, an estate of eighty-five homesteads (hemman) and an iron processing industrial facility. The iron processing enterprise was prosperous, not least owing to specialized workers recruited from Wallonia, and had a crucial role in Swedish warfare and Sweden's development into a powerful state in seventeenth-century Europe.

Louis De Geer I was born in Liège and was of a Brabant aristocratic merchant family. He married Adrienne Gérard (c.1590–1634) in 1612, and shortly afterwards they took up residence in Amsterdam. Louis De Geer I divided his time between Sweden and the Dutch Republic, a practice followed by several of his descendants. After Louis De Geer's I death in Amsterdam in 1652, his son Louis De Geer II (1622–1695) inherited Finspång. In 1654, Louis De Geer II married Jeanne Parmentier, a Dutch noblewoman, in Utrecht. The couple moved to Sweden after the wedding and started transforming the old manor house into a modern castle in 1668, with the help of the architect Adriaan Dortsman (1635–1682). The rebuilding of Finspång castle, however, was not finished until the eighteenth century. When Louis De Geer II died at Finspång in 1695, the estate was inherited by his second son Jean Jacques De Geer (1666–1738). The eldest of the brothers, Louis De Geer III (1655–1691), had died before his father in 1691. Jean Jacques was born in Utrecht, and married Jacqueline Cornélie van Assendelft (1682–1754) in The Hague in 1704. The bride was from a noble Dutch family and the daughter of The Hague's mayor. Their first son Louis De Geer IV (1705–1758), although born in The Hague, would later live permanently in Sweden. He married twice in Sweden, both times to Swedish noblewomen.

The library at Finspång castle was founded in the seventeenth century and gradually enlarged over the centuries with items acquired in the Dutch Republic and Sweden. In 1747, Louis De Geer IV completed the first handwritten catalogue of the Finspång library, “Catalogus librorum bibliothecae Finspongensis”, which included an outlined history of the family’s library.⁵ The first library at Finspång was founded by Louis De Geer I, who had brought from the Dutch Republic to Sweden “a collection of books, which according to the liking of the time was not to be despised”.⁶ At his death in 1652, this book collection was partly divided among his children, and after some time it “could not be known as a library any more”.⁷ Louis De Geer III (1655–1691) had a crucial role in the re-establishment of the library. He was already an erudite man and a keen book collector in his youth and in ensuing years of travelling across Europe. According to the catalogue of 1747, he returned the library to its “former esteem and value” with a “large quantity of his own acquired books”.⁸ Friends of the family also contributed to the growth of the library. The introduction to the 1747 catalogue informs that many books were left by a friend after his early death, without revealing his name. The identity of this anonymous donor was likely Anders von Drake (1682–1744), as a large number of books have his exlibris.⁹ In addition, Louis De Geer IV himself contributed books to his family’s library.

⁵ The entire introduction from the 1747 catalogue appears on pp. XVI–XVII in Lundstedt, Katalog öfver Finspongs bibliotek.

The 1747 catalogue includes 6,567 titles distributed over about 8,000 volumes. The books that were on the shelves in the eighteenth-century library at Finspång in general contain the old shelfmarks and display the old stamp mark with the arms of De Geer surrounded by “Fin-spong: Bibliothec:” (Figure 2). After the completion of the catalogue in 1747, all subsequently acquired books were listed in an appendix to the catalogue, entered consecutively according to the numerus currens principle. Several of these books were disposed of in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, some at auctions. Titles listed in the appendix but now missing from the Finspång library are, for example, found in nineteenth-century sales catalogues: Johan Jacob’s books sold in Stockholm in 1833, and Nils Gyldenstolpe’s library sold in the 1880s.¹⁰

Gyldenstolpe, 1874.

In 1758, about a decade after completing the catalogue, Louis De Geer IV died at Finspång. The estate was inherited by his son Johan Jacob De Geer (1737–1809), and was later divided equally among Johan Jacob's four children. Eventually, the De Geer family left Finspång; in 1856 the entire estate, including the castle and its interior fittings, was bought by the entrepreneur Carl Edvard Ekman (1826–1903). During Ekman's time as the owner of Finspång, the library was enlarged considerably. He incorporated not only his own book collection but also those of his late father Gustav Henrik Ekman (1774–1847) and father-in-law Frans Adolf von Scheele (1795–1863).¹¹ He also bought books from book dealers and at auctions in Stockholm.

The seventeenth-century library was located on the top floor in the northern wing of the castle. By the early 1870s, the rooms were too small to hold the collection. Ekman then moved the library to a newly designed larger space on the ground floor, and commissioned a new catalogue in connection with the transfer. In the summers between 1876 and 1880, Bernhard Lundstedt (1846–1914), librarian at the Royal Library in Stockholm, compiled a catalogue of the entire library at Finspång, published in 1883.¹² Lundstedt confirmed that the major part of the old library remained almost intact. Only sixty-four titles included in the 1747 main catalogue (i.e. apart from the appendix) were missing from the shelves at Finspång library in 1878.¹³ In 1903, the city of Norrköping bought the entire library and it was transferred from its location in the castle to Norrköping City Library.

The present catalogue covers all items that include music notation, printed or in manuscript, belonging to the Finpong collection and currently in the Norrköping City Library. Many of the volumes containing notated music, both in printed publications and in manuscripts, were listed under the same headings in De Geer's 1747 and Lundstedt's 1883 catalogues. As the physical placement of the books in the library formed the basis for the two catalogues, the music volumes were consequently kept together at the same location in the library at the castle. Items including musical notation were, however, also listed under other headings in the catalogues such as literature and hymnology, and they were probably located in other parts of the library rooms. For the present catalogue, all items including music notation are included, regardless of the sections in which they were inserted in the catalogues and where they were actually kept in the Finspång library. In addition to items with notated music, writings about music in the Finspong collection have been included in the catalogue.

Accumulation of Music

Most of the music in the Finspong collection was acquired, collected and copied from the late 1630s to the 1750s. After than point, only a few music books were added to the library. The music from the De Geer period can be roughly separated into different chronological layers connected to specific individuals of the family. The division into layers, however, cannot be done with complete precision or with full certainty. Although the dating of a manuscript or the year of a printed publication can give a safe date post quem, it is not always clear at which point the item was actually acquired. Apart from the small number of music items added in the late eighteenth century, most of the music manuscripts and printed publications seem to have been acquired while the De Geer family were mainly resident in the Dutch Republic.¹⁴ As it has proved difficult to establish at which point(s) the music was transferred to Finspång, it is hoped that further investigations will bring more light to this issue.

Three Generations of Louis De Geer

The earliest layer covers the period from the late sixteenth century to the 1640s. Most of the editions included in this earliest layer are collections of French chansons, many printed in Paris, while a few contain Italian secular songs, or other types of secular vocal music printed in France, the Southern Netherlands and the Dutch Republic. Two early editions include sacred or spiritual repertoire: Claude Le Jeune's Dodécacorde (La Rochelle, 1598), twelve settings of psalms in the different modes, and the psalm collection Souter Liedekens (Amsterdam, 1613). These two are among the oldest music items in the Finspong collection, together with a copy of Livre septième (Amsterdam, 1608)¹⁵ and five editions printed by Pierre Phalèse Jr. (c.1545–1629) in Antwerp: Horatio Vecchi's Convito musicale (1598), a collection of chansons by Dirck Janszoon Sweelinck and Cornelis Verdonck (1608), Luca Marenzio's collection of spiritual madrigals (1610) and two volumes of chansons by Jean de Castro (1610). The five works printed by Phalèse were bound together, suggesting that they were acquired at the same point sometime after 1610. Given the early years of publication, these editions could have been acquired by Louis De Geer I and Adrienne Gérard.

Five music manuscripts and one printed publication constitute a second discrete group of items, which all include music notated in lute tablature. These six items are the only ones in the Finspong collection with tablature notation for lute, and their datings, within the short time span 1638–1640, link them together. One of the manuscripts (Finspong 9096:3) has four different handwritten dates, 25 August 1638 and 12, 13 and 22 September in the same year. A second (Finspong 9074) shows the handwritten note “Ludouicus de Geer Hic nomen meum pono Quia librum perdere nolo Si perdere voluisse Hic nomen meum non posuissem” and was dated “Paris 8 September 1639”. A third (Finspong 9096:11) has the owner's mark, “Ludovicus de Geer est possessor”, and is dated 26 January 1640. Of the remaining two manuscripts, one (Finspong 1122) is headed “Balets, Alemandes et Sarabandes par L'Espine” and the other (Finspong 9096:1) includes seven pieces for lute. The printed anthology of lute music, also notated in lute tablature, Tablature de Luth de différents auteurs, sur les accords nouveaux (Paris, 1638), probably belongs to the same group. Jan Olof Rudén argued that Louis De Geer I acquired this lute music.¹⁶ The lute music could also have been acquired by Louis De Geer II, in connection with his musical training. In the late 1630s, he was about seventeen years old, and could have obtained the music in connection with a study soujourn in Paris.

Twenty printed publications probably also belong to the earliest layer. All editions were printed in Paris, mainly in the 1630s and 1640s, and contain French chansons.¹⁷ Pieces from two of these editions were copied into the the manuscript dated in Paris 1639 (Finspong 9074), linking them together. Twenty editions are all small booklets in octavo format. All but two were originally bound together in two volumes, confirmed by two surviving vellum covers. Although the separate editions have been detached later, it suggests that they were acquired at the same time.

A second layer covers a period from the 1660s to the 1680s. It includes items with music for guitar, notated in tablature. Among these is the only known surviving copy of Rémy Médard's Pièces De Guitare, printed in Paris by Ganière. Although the collection lacks a year of publication, it was printed in Paris probably in or soon after 1676, as the included "Extraict du priuilege" gives that year.¹⁸ A performance of the music was reported in Mercure galant in March 1679, providing a date ante quem for the publication.¹⁹ In addition to this printed collection, two manuscripts (Finspong 9096:2 and 9096:14) include music for guitar. Both volumes are seemingly of French origin, as indicated by the watermark motifs and the types of printed staves.²⁰ Both of them include pieces from stage works by Louis XIV's court composer Jean-Baptiste Lully (1632–1687). A date post quem can be set to 1680, as some of the pieces were drawn Lully's opera Proserpine, which premiered in that year. The two manuscripts are also clearly connected with Médard. In the first of the manuscripts, headings such as "mise de Médard" indicate that it was he who transcribed the Lully pieces, and the second manuscript includes pieces not only arranged but also composed by Médard.

The three Médard sources date from approximately the same time, suggesting that the three items were acquired together. On one of the guitar manuscripts (Finspong 9096:14) has a handwritten monogram "LdG" on the inside cover. Louis De Geer II – who probably acquired the older repertoire for lute – was an old man in the 1680s (he was born in 1622), making it less plausible that he would have acquired the guitar repertoire. The point of time would instead be consistent with Louis De Geer III, the erudite uncle who enlarged the library at Finspång. After some time at the University in Uppsala in the 1670s, Louis III travelled through Europe during the 1680s.²¹ He thus probably possessed both the musical knowledge and the opportunities to acquire the guitar music.

Apart from Médard's printed collection, only four music editions (Finspong 2020[1], 2020[2], 2046 and 9106:1–4) were published between the 1660s and the 1680s. The books were printed in places such as Copenhagen, Amsterdam and Antwerp. Only Finspong 2046 has a handwritten owner's mark: "L De Geer [Mp]". No ex libris inscriptions or annotations indicate a specific acquirer or give any details of the acquisition of the other editions. In addition, two comprehensive and significant books of music theory were probably acquired in the second half of the seventeenth century: Marin Mersenne's Harmoniconum libri XII (Paris, 1648) and Athanasius Kircher's Musurgia universalis sive ars magna consoni et dissoni (Rome, 1650).²² Both the music and the two books could have been acquired by Louis De Geer III during his extensive travels through Europe in the 1680s. Another possibility is that these items – although then being quite old – belonged to the next generation: that of Jean Jacques De Geer and Jacqueline Cornélie van Assendelft.

Jean Jacques De Geer and Jacqueline Cornélie van Assendelft

A large part of the music in the Finspong collection was copied and acquired from the 1690s to the mid-eighteenth century, in the lifetimes of Jean Jacques De Geer and Jacqueline Cornélie van Assendelft. A group of almost twenty music manuscripts contains many items that can be linked to one another through common features, and thus to approximately the same time and place. Two of the manuscript volumes bear the couple's names or initials: Finspong 9096:13 has "I. C. V. Assendelft" embossed in gold in a medallion on the leather covers and Finspong 1138:1 has "J: C: V. A." and "Jain Jaques" [sic] entered by hand. The type of repertoire and features in common also link them together. Frequent and similar signs of music teaching are found in several of the volumes. The type of repertoire overlaps between these manuscript volumes, and a number of the tunes and short pieces recur in more than one volume. Since nearly all of these manuscripts include music drawn from stage works or music published in an earlier printed collection, it is often possible to establish a date post quem when the manuscripts were put together.

Several easily distinguishable hands copied music into several of the manuscripts. Establishing the identities of the copyists is beyond the scope of the present catalogue. Three manuscripts (Finspong 1138:1, 9096:13 and 9096:16) were, at least in part, copied by the same copyist (Figure 3). This copyist has a link to Jacqueline Cornélie van Assendelft, as it copied music into the volumes (Finspong 9096:13 and 1138:1) that bear her name or monogram. The third manuscript (Finspong 9096:16) includes French airs, of which about twenty are included in Recueil d'airs sérieux et à boire de différents auteurs (Paris: Christophe Ballard, 1714). The copyist added information about which of the monthly-issued booklets the songs were copied from, indicating that he or she most likely copied the music from the printed originals. Excerpts from Jean-Baptiste Matho's 1714 opera Arion, confirms a copying date after 1714, but probably not too long afterwards, since such pieces were often topical.

Two manuscript volumes containing instrumental music (Finspong 9096:10 and 9098) are closely linked together. They include the same type of printed ruled music paper and copied by the same two copyists (Figure 4 and Figure 5). Both these volumes contain headings in Dutch and well-known Dutch pieces, such as Rommelskerken and Wat Zalmen op den Avond doen, attesting to their origin in a Dutch-speaking context.

Four of the manuscript volumes (Finspong 9096:5, 9096:6, 9096:9 and 9096:7) include an engraving signed by the Dutch printer Arnold van den Eynden, and include pre-printed staves. The manuscripts were probably acquired in a relatively short time span, as the same hand copied music into two of them (Finspong 9096:5 and 9096:6).

Only one music manuscript in the Finspong collection (Finspong 1136:2) includes keyboard tablature notation. This volume comprises six suites and a set of variations of the tune “Holländische Nachti-gahl”, all by “J.A.R.” (Jan Adam Reincken), as well as a Canzonetta attributed to “D.B.H.” (Dieterich Buxtehude).²³ It is possible that additional suites in other keys could originally have been included in the volume, as the overdimensioned cover suggests that two thirds of the original contents are missing (Figure 7).

Figure 7. The binding and spine of the manuscript volume Finspong 1136:2, indicating that a significant part of the original contents has been detached.

²³ On Reincken’s suites and concordant manuscripts, see Robert S. Hill, “Stilanalyse und Überlieferungsproblematik des Variationssuiten-Repertoires J. A. Reinckens”, Dietrich Buxtehude und die europäische Musik seiner Zeit: Bericht über das Lübecker Symposion 1987 (Kieler Schriften zur Musikwissenschaft, 35), Arnfried Edler and Friedhelm Krummacher (eds.), Kassel: Bärenreiter 1990, pp. 204–214.

Some of Reincken's suites and the piece by Buxtehude (BuxWV 225) appear to be unica. Reincken's variations over Holländische Nachtagh are included in a contemporary printed Dutch publication: VI Suites, divers airs avec leurs variations, printed by Estienne Roger in Amsterdam around 1710.²⁴ However, as no composers' names are included, it seems unlikely that it would have served as the copytext.

The most recent music manuscript in this layer of music in the Finspong collection seems to be Finspong 9096:12, a volume containing French vocal airs. The volume was in all likeliness copied after 1724, as twelve songs are included in Recueil d'Airs sérieux et à boire de différents auteurs. Année 1724 (Paris, 1724), although no copy is preserved within the Finspong collection. A separate sheet of music found in the volume includes one of the airs in the volume, Les peines près de vous. It was supplied with a new text in Swedish, "Hos er min Iris" ("With you my Iris"), confirming an otherwise rare Swedish connection in the Finspong collection.

Many of the music manuscripts from the period of Jean Jacques and Jacqueline Cornélie were apparently used in connection with music training. Nine music manuscripts (Finspong 1137, 9096:3, 9096:5, 9096:7, 9096:9, 9096:10, 9096:14, 9096:15 and 9098) include entire pages or staves with music training, such as lists of note names, note and rest values, accidentals, slurs, time signatures, clefs and simple solmisation. These annotations are more or less identical, showing that they were probably copied from one volume to another, or from a common master volume.

In addition to the music in manuscript, much of the printed music dates from the period of Jean Jacques and Jacqueline Cornélie. Almost half of the music editions in the Finspong collection have a year of publication in the 1690s or the early eighteenth century. These include music printed in Paris, for example the score of André Campra's L'Europe galante (Finspong 1123), two volumes of Jean-Baptiste Bousset's Livre d'airs sérieux et à boire (Finspong 1121:1 and 1121:2) and ten volumes of Recueil d'ais sérieux et à boire (Finspong 1134[1]–1134[10]). Several of the publications contain French music in editions issued in Amsterdam: Amédée Le Chevalier's reprints of French airs, Recueil d'airs nouveaux sérieux et à boire books 1–4 (Finspong 1125:1–4) and his collection of extracts from Lully's stage works, Les trio des opera de monsieur de Lully books 1–2 (Finspong 1127[1]:1–3 and 1127[2]:1–3), as well as three volumes of Recueil d'airs sérieux et à boire printed by Jean Louis de Lorme and Estienne Roger in 1696–1697 (Finspong 1134:[1]–1134:[3]).

One of the editions that is currently considered to be a unica in the Finspong collection is entitled Airs pour le concert de Mercredy, le 12 Decembre. Au Doule. Composes par Jean Abell Anglois (Finspong 9071).²⁵ The printed sheets comprise three songs by the English composer John Abell (1653–after 1716), and lack both a printer's name and year of publication. The title indicates that the music was performed in the Doelenzaal in Amsterdam on 12 December 1696.²⁶ The publication was printed from movable type and the music typeface is the same as that used by Le Chevalier to print Les trio des opera de monsieur de Lully (Amsterdam, 1690–1691). The typeface had been sold at an auction in 1695 and bought by Estienne Roger, who used it for Abell's occasional songs and for later publications.²⁷

Approximately half of the music in the Finspong collection from the period of the De Geer family can be placed in the period of Jean Jacques De Geer and Jacqueline Cornélie van Assendelft. This music most likely originated in the musical activities of the couple and their family.

Music Added to the Library after 1750

From the period following the deaths of Jean Jacques (1738) and Jacqueline Cornélie (1754) to the De Geer family's sale of the estate in 1856, relatively few music items seem to have been added to the Finspong library. Two folio manuscript scores were added in the 1750s or later. Finspong 1130 contains the reduced score of a stage work, Syrinx, first performed in Stockholm on 20 May 1747.²⁸ The Stockholm, tryckt uti kongl. Tryckeriet, Stockholm: Kungl. tryckeriet*, 1747. Gustav Klemming noticed similarities to a German libretto of a similar title from 1707: Syrinx Wurde Mit Königl. Majestät in Pohlen und Churfürstl. Durchlaucht zu Sachsen allergnädigster Bewilligung Auf dem Leipziger Theatro in einer Opera An der Neu-Jahr-Messe, Anno 1707 präsentiert, [s.l.,] 1707. Gustav Edvard Klemming, Sveriges dramatiska litteratur till 1863, Stockholm: Norstedt, 1863–1879, p. 85.

Finspong collection holds a copy of the second edition of this libretto from 1748, suggesting a connection between the two items.²⁹ The compiler of the work and probable composer of some of the numbers was Johan Ohl (1704–1766).³⁰ Why this manuscript score ended up in the Finspong collection is not clear; however, it could be related to Ohl's contacts with Dutch networks in Sweden, as he was the organist of the Reformed Dutch Church in Stockholm. The second manuscript score (Finspong 1133) is a reduced score for the opera comique Raton et Rosette, which had its first performance in Paris in 1753. It was a parody of Titon et l'Aurore, composed by Jean-Joseph Cassanéa de Mondonville. The Finspong music layer dating from after 1750 also includes copies of Skaldestycken satte i musik, issued in eighteen volumes by Olof Åhlström in Stockholm, 1795–1823.

Between the time when Ekman bought Finspång in 1856 and the completion of Lundstedt's catalogue in 1883, the entire library was considerably enlarged with newly acquired books.³¹ As mentioned above, Ekman had incorporated two entire book collections, those of his father Gustav Henrik Ekman (d. 1847) and of his stepfather Frans Adolf von Scheele (d. 1863). Books were also bought at book dealers and auctions in Stockholm. The new additions included also some notated music, such as hymn and chorale books, songs by Carl Michael Bellman (1740–1795) and collections of Swedish folk songs, the latest of which was published in 1883. There were probably additions to the library in the years after Lundstedt had finished his catalogue and before the Finspong collection was transferred to Norrköping in 1904. One such addition is the copy of Bā'al Tefillah, oder der Practische Vorbeter (Gothenburg, 1871), edited by Abraham Baer (1834–1894) and comprised music for the synagogue in Gothenburg. The copy was a gift from Charlotte von Scheele and it was probably incorporated in the library after 1883, since it is not included in Lundstedt's catalogue.

Printed Publications and Music in Manuscript

The following section will deal more in detail with the music items in the Finspong collection. As the aim is to provide an outline of the music acquired and used by the De Geer family, it will only include the music from the De Geer period, from the beginning of the seventeenth century to 1856.³² Printed editions with music and music manuscripts are treated separately and the final section will discuss the music repertoire included in these items.

Printed Publications

Seventy-five editions including notated music in the Finspong collection have a year of publication before 1793, and likely belonged to De Geer's family library.

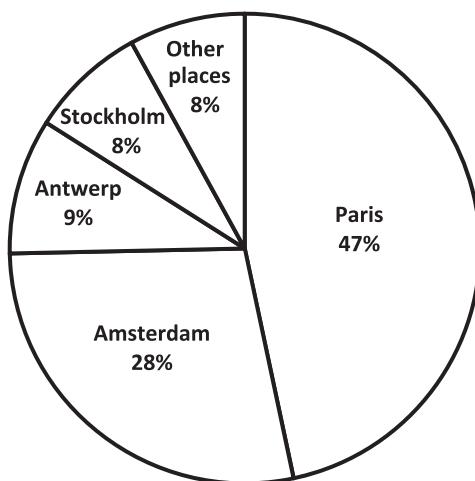

Figure 8. Printed music editions in the Finspong collection with a year of publication from before 1793 according to place of publication.

Almost half of the editions were printed in Paris. Several are collections of secular songs by single composers, such as Guillaume Michel, Jean Boyer, François de Chancy, Nicolas Chastelet, Louis Mollier, Denis Macé and André de Rosiers. Others belong to series of anthologies, for example, Livre de chansons pour danser et pour boire (1635–1646), Recueil d'airs sérieux et à boire de différents auteurs

³² The numbers excluded in this chapter are all in the form of printed publications: Finspong 1121:3, 1992, 2072, 7270, 7322:5, 7324, 7328, 7330–31, 7574:2, 7706, 8044, 9092 and 9110:1–6. These editions are anyhow included in the subsequent catalogue.

(1697–1698) and Jean-Baptiste Bousset's Livre d'airs sérieux et à boire (1697–1698).

Another large group of editions were printed in the Southern Netherlands or the Dutch Republic.³³ The Antwerp editions date from early and mid-seventeenth century, while most of the Amsterdam editions date from around 1700. This change reflects the shift in location of the music printing business in the region. At the beginning of the period, Antwerp firms such as Phalèse's dominated. At the end of the seventeenth century, this position was taken over by printing firms in Amsterdam, for example Estienne Roger's. Other editions published in the region were reprints of earlier publications or anthologies of pieces issued elsewhere in Europe. Privileges did not extend beyond national borders, and printers in the Southern Netherlands and the Dutch Republic specialized in this kind of recycling.³⁴ Several of the editions issued in Amsterdam contained French music that was previously published by the Ballards, such as the three volumes of Recueil d'airs sérieux et à boire (Finspong 1134:1–3), the four volumes of Recueil d'airs nouveaux (Finspong 1125:1–4), Jacques de Gouy's psalm paraphrases (Finspong 9084:1–4), and the two volumes of Lully's trios (Finspong 1127:1–2). As mentioned earlier, although the Finspong collection includes some printed Italian music, none of the editions was printed in Italy. The editions reprinted in Antwerp and Rotterdam contain music by composers including Giacomo Gastoldi, Horatio Vecchi, Luca Marenzio and Marco Uccellini.

Some of the Finspong music was printed in places that were more peripheral. A few publications were issued in places such as Rotterdam, La Rochelle, Frankfurt am Main, Königsberg and Copenhagen. In Sweden music printing was a relatively limited enterprise, with only a few existing sets of music typeface for printing from movable

Music Manuscripts

The Finspong collection contains twenty-nine music manuscripts, all dating from the period when the De Geer family owned the Finspång estate. The manuscripts are of varying size and proportions. Some are small booklets, covered in paper and bound with thread, that contain only a few tunes. Others are bound in expensive leather bindings, comprising more than two hundred pieces.

The manuscript volumes have varying geographical origins, such as France, the Dutch Republic and Sweden. Their origins can be established by different features of the manuscripts taken together, such as type of paper, the existence of printed staves or engravings, and the style of the copyists' handwriting. Some main watermark motifs clearly indicate a French origin, as the case with bunch of grapes.³⁶ Establishing the origin of a manuscript based solely on its main watermark motif, however, can be unreliable. Paper manufactured in France and the Dutch Republic circulated widely in Europe. Seemingly Dutch watermark motifs such as the Arms of Amsterdam can also be found in paper manufactured elsewhere in Europe. These watermarks could relate to format and paper quality rather than geographical origin. In some cases, an additional watermark can include for example initials or a name. This can reveal information of the manufacturer and are therefore of vital importance to establish the origin of the paper.

The group of music manuscripts of French origin includes two comprehensive volumes (Finspong 1128:1 and 1128:2) with music from Lully's stage works. The two volumes have printed title pages and indices. They were printed in the atelier of the music dealer and publisher Henry Foucault, who started his business in the 1680s. The existence of other very similar copies in libraries and collections outside Sweden attests to the fact that several nearly identical volumes were copied by Foucault's Parisian firm at the same time.³⁷

Five manuscripts (Finspong 1136:1, 1137, 9096:2, 9096:4 and 9096:14) show typical French paper types, in some cases also with the family names of the paper manufacturers such as Cusson and Colombier. One of the manuscripts (Finspong 1122) has an engraving with the text “Par Pierre Ballard au mont parnasse rue s Iean de Beauvois”. This shows that the volume probably was a product by Pierre Ballard’s firm in Paris. The paper is French and contains a watermark of three open compasses under a crescent in crowned shield and the name of the paper manufacturer: “Nicolas Denise”.³⁸ A second type of a Nicolas Denise watermark is found in another manuscript (Finspong 9074), possibly linking both sources to the Pierre Ballard firm.

Finspong 9096:1 may have more complicated origins. The watermark kneeling man with cross in shield is often associated with Italian paper manufacturers. The French dance movements included in the column are notated in lute tablature and the tuning scheme is headed “Accord par unissons et octaves”. These details suggest that this volume rather was copied in France, supposedly at the same time as the other lute tablatures.

It has been suggested elsewhere that one of the manuscripts (Finspong 9096:3) could be of English origin, probably based on the English titles of the movements included.³⁹ The watermark (horn in shield / I DURAN) indicates that the paper was manufactured in France. Several paper makers with the name Duran(d) were active in seventeenth-century France.⁴⁰ The French origin of the paper does not exclude the possibility that the music was copied in England, as much of the paper used in England was imported from France.⁴¹

Another group of manuscripts probably originates in the the Dutch Republic. Four volumes (Finspong 9096:5, 9096:6, 9096:7 and 9096:9) have an engraving depicting a band of cupids, a satyr and Minerva playing instruments and singing in a pastoral landscape with the banderole “Musae celo beat”.⁴² The engraving is signed “Tot Utrecht bÿ Arnoldus vanden Eynden”, referring to the Dutch printer Arnold van den Eynden, who was active as music printer in Utrecht 1675–

1795.⁴³ Other manuscripts were copied on paper types that were frequently used in the Dutch Republic.

A few music manuscripts seemingly have other origins than France, the Southern Netherlands or the Dutch Republic. The volume of keyboard music by Reincken and Buxtehude (Finspong 1136:2) was most likely copied in Northern Germany, as suggested by the type of paper and the copyist of the tablature.⁴⁴ The manuscript score headed “Opera af Sýrins” (Finspong 1130) was in all likelihood copied in Sweden, as this stage work in Swedish had its first performance in Stockholm in 1747.

Fourteen of the music manuscripts in the Finspong collection were made up of sheaves of ruled music paper. This is a notably large portion, considering that this type of prefabricated music paper from the seventeenth century has not survived in large quantities.⁴⁵ One of these volumes (Finspong 9096:2) has engraved staves, while the other manuscripts have staves printed from movable types. Details of the different types of ruled music paper are gathered in a table in the Appendix.

Five of the manuscripts that use paper with printed staves are most likely of French origin. Two volumes display types that are contained in Laurent Guillo’s catalogue of French ruled music paper.⁴⁶ The first is of the type designated by Guillo as “PAP-3” and the second is of Guillo’s type “PAP-65”, both made of paper from the manufacturer Nicolas Denise. The two booklets were probably produced and distributed by Pierre Ballard’s firm in Paris, as suggested by Guillo.⁴⁷ The other twelve volumes that use ruled music paper are of different designs. Three of them (Finspong 1136:1, 9096:2 and 9096:14) are made of paper which is most likely also of French origin, considering the watermarks of the paper. None of them are included in Guillo’s

The other volumes using ruled music paper (Finspong 1133, 1138:1, 1138:2, 9096:5, 9096:6, 9096:9, 9096:10, 9096:16 and 9098) are most likely Dutch, considering the watermarks, copyists, bindings and musical repertoire. In addition, there are owner's mark of Jacqueline Cornélie van Assendelft and a number of annotations in Dutch in several of the volumes. Two manuscripts (Finspong 9096:10 and 9098) have identical ruling design, although no signs or printers' marks can reveal their more specific origin. Three (Finspong 9096:5, 9096:6 and 9096:9) of the volumes with engravings by Arnold van den Eynden have printed staves, and these were likely also printed by Eynden's printing firm in Utrecht.

The Music Repertoire

French music dominates the part of the Finspong collection that was collected during the period when the De Geer family resided at Fin-spång. This reflects the appetite for French music among the elites in northern Europe during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Almost half of the editions were printed in Paris, and all but two of the manuscript volumes contain French repertoire.

Apart from French music, the Finspong collection includes a considerable amount of music with an origin in the Southern Netherlands and the Dutch Republic. Several of the pieces included in the manuscript volumes have titles in Dutch, attesting to their geographical origin. Several of the printed publications contain music by composers active in the region and many were published for example in Antwerp or in Amsterdam.

In addition to French and Dutch music, the collection contains a limited amount of music by composers who were active in other parts of Europe. A few titles in the manuscripts point to an English origin, among them extracts from Henry Purcell's The Fairy Queen. Five printed collections include music by Italian composers (Finspong 1132:1–6, 9078:1–2, 9106:1–4, 9108[1]:1–6 and 9108[3]:1–6), although all of these are contained in editions reissued by printers in the Southern Netherlands or the Dutch Republic.

A few editions and manuscripts include music by composers active in German-speaking lands or Scandinavia. Buxtehude was active in northern Germany, as was Reincken, although he was probably born in the Dutch Republic. Music by composers active in Bergen, Frankfurt/Oder and Königsberg, respectively, is included in single editions printed in these cities. Music by composers who were active in Sweden is contained in three collections of songs in Swedish by the Swedish Hofkapellmeister Gustav Düben and the court musician Peter Paul Hoppe. In addition, a manuscript score contains the stage work

Syrinx, probably compiled by Johan Ohl in the mid-eighteenth century.

The largest share of music in the Finspong collection is vocal, with settings of secular texts being most frequent. The dominant genre when it comes to both printed and manuscript music is French airs and chansons. Many pieces constitute extracts from French operas and other stage works. Pieces drawn from stage works by Lully are especially frequent, and all but two of the manuscript volumes include at least some pieces by Lully. Only one French opera is represented by a score of the entire work: André Campra's L'Europe galante in the second edition from 1698.

Apart from French songs and airs, the Finspong collection contains a large portion of Dutch secular songs. The 't Amsteldams Minne-beekie' was a popular song book that was reprinted several times, the copy at Finspong was printed in Amsterdam in 1645.⁴⁸ The music manuscripts include also songs in Dutch.

In addition to songs for one or two voices, the collection includes editions of music in more elaborate secular vocal genres in large-scale settings, such as Italian madrigals and canzonettas. The anthology Musica Divina consists mainly of compositions by Italian composers such as Luca Marenzio and Giovanni de Macque. It also includes a few Italian madrigals by local composers. It was first issued in Antwerp in 1583 and was later reissued at least six times, attesting to its popularity. Finspong 1132:1–6 is a copy of the latest known edition, from 1634. Pierre Phalèse Jr. was the printer of another five publications of more elaborate repertoire in the Finspong collection, with music by Marenzio, Giacomo Gastoldi, Horatio Vecchi, Cornelis Verdonck and Dirck Janszoon Sweelinck. Cornelis Thymanszoon Padbrué's settings of Latin erotic poems (Finspong 1131:1–2) were published in 1641 and they constitute a rare example of madrigals with Dutch texts. Jacob Westerbaen translated the originally Latin poems, written by Janus Secundus.

Although secular music dominates, the Finspong collection includes some sacred music. The music manuscripts contain only a few tunes for psalm paraphrases or hymns (in Finspong 1138:1, 9096:3, 9096:4 and 9096:15). The sacred repertoire is instead included in printed publications. In addition to volumes with hymns and liturgical music, there are several printed collections of psalm paraphrases, reflecting the prominent role these had both in the reformed Dutch Republic and in Lutheran Sweden.

Two of the publications with Dutch psalm paraphrases were widely known and frequently re-issued. Willem van Haecht's De CL Psalmen Davids in Nederduytschen, was first printed in 1579 for the Lutheran congregation in Antwerp. The Finspong collection holds both parts of the publication, in editions from 1647 (Finspong 564[1–2]). Souter Liedekens ("Psalter songs") was the first complete collection of settings of metrical psalms in Dutch. It appeared in several editions during the second half of the sixteenth and the beginning of the seventeenth century; the copy (Finspong 2042) is the Amsterdam edition from 1613. The tunes have different origins, such as Dutch folksongs and French chansons.⁴⁹

The Finspong collection also holds a copy of Ambrosius Lobwasser's psalter in German printed in Amsterdam in 1669 (Finspong 2046). Two other collection of psalm paraphrases are in the French language. The first is Jacques de Gouy's four part settings (Finspong 9084:1–4) from 1650 of 50 of Antoine Godeau's French psalm paraphrases, published in Paris in 1648. The publication has a Dutch connection, as the copy in the Finspong collection is the reissue printed in Amsterdam in 1691. The reissue was most likely intended for the French diaspora in the Dutch Republic, caused by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The second collection, Dodécacorde (Finspong 1126:1–6), contains twelve settings by Claude Le Jeune of psalm paraphrases from the Genevan psalter, including large-scale settings of up to seven parts. Dodécacorde was printed in the Huguenot stronghold La Rochelle in 1598, at a time when Le Jeune had escaped from Paris due to his reformist faith.⁵⁰ In addition, there is a collection of settings of psalm paraphrases translated into Swedish: Lobwasser's psalter translated by Abraham Kempe, published in 1650 (Finspong 572). Kempe's publication was the first translation into Swedish of the complete work of Lobwasser.⁵¹

In addition to psalm paraphrases, the Finspong collection contains collections of spiritual songs and two are Dutch. Of Hieronymus Sweerts' Innerlykke ziel-tochten Op 't H. Avondmaal the Finspong copy (Finspong 2086) is the third edition from 1692. Kruis gezangen of hémel weg (Finspong 1124) was published in the 1690s (c. 1698) and was reissued several times. Hertzliches seyten-Spiel oder Geistreiche und Schrifftmässige Lieder (Finspong 2058) from 1657 includes German spiritual poems by Johann Preuss. The author had drawn the tunes from collections of psalms and German songs, while only a few were possibly newly composed. The Norwegian Dorothe Engelbretsdatter's Siaelens Sang-Offer Indeholdende Gudelige Sange ("The soul's singing offering containing godly songs") was first issued in Copenhagen in 1678. It appeared in several reissues, the copy (Finspong 2020[1]) being from 1681. Apart from poems to be sung to well-known hymn tunes, Engelbretsdatter's collection includes more than twenty newly composed tunes. The copy of her publication in the Finspong collection is bound together with a copy of the Danish hymn writer Thomas Kingo's (1634–1703) first part of Andelige Siunge-Koor ("Spiritual singing choir"), in an edition from 1680 (Finspong 2020[2]). In the case of another collection of spiritual songs in Swedish, Siälenes himla-lust på jorden ("The heavenly joy of the soul on earth", Finspong 2096), most of the songs seem to be translations, by Carl Gustaf Österling. Peter Paul Hoppe composed twenty-one of the tunes, three were drawn from Lobwasser and an additional twelve are of unknown origin.⁵²

There is also a significant share of instrumental music, also primarily French. Many French airs in the music manuscripts seem to be intended to be played on an instrument, as they lack text apart from the title. Several appear in arrangements for lute or guitar, and then mostly in tablature notation. Apart from these arrangements, there are only two examples of more elaborate instrumental music. The first is the collection including music by Reincken and Buxtehude for keyboard (Finspong 1136:2). The second is a collection of more than thirty sinfonias for solo violin or string ensemble by the Italian composer Marco Uccellini, printed in Antwerp in 1669 (Finspong 9106:1–4). This was a reissue of an original Italian edition printed in Venice in 1660.

Many music manuscripts in the Finspong collection were apparently copied with the intention of performance and bear clear signs of use and this holds for some of the printed publications as well. Other items were most likely acquired without a primary intention of performing the music. The printed publications by the Phalèse firm in Antwerp from the beginning of the sixteenth century include elaborate secular and sacred vocal music for up to seven voices. A copy of André Campra's L'Europe galante contains not only the entire ballet but is also bound in a French lavish binding. These copies were rather gifts or acquired as collectors' items. Musical education and the performance of music, as well as an opulent library of prestigious manuscripts and printed items, constituted both aspects of the distinguished life of the elites. The music manuscripts, the printed publications and music performed within the De Geer family circle all played a crucial part in the image of one of the most prosperous families in early modern northern Europe.

Catalogue

This catalogue contains all music in the Finspong collection ordered according to their library sigla. Rather than being a catalogue, i.e. ordered systematically according to composers' names and to titles, a more accurate denomination would be an inventory. The decision to keep the order according to the library sigla is based on the fact that the collection largely consists of composited collections, not single pieces. Many of the pieces included among the manuscripts are, moreover, unattributed, which speaks against a catalogue ordered according to composers' names and work titles. The editions and manuscripts are described one by one in the order of their shelfmarks in the Finspong collection.

The catalogue includes all music in manuscript and in printed publications in the Finspong collection, as it is preserved today. The two existing historical catalogues covering the entire historical library at Finspong, i.e. Louis De Geer's handwritten catalogue dated 1747 and Bernhard Lundstedt's catalogue printed in 1883, list most of the music items contained in the Finspong collection in Norrköping City Library today. Both catalogues contain inaccuracies when it comes to authors and titles of the musical items. Some titles are missing, such as some editions that were bound together in volumes and not always distinguished as separate titles.

A handful of modern music catalogues deal specifically with parts of the music in the Finspong collection, from different perspectives. Åke Davidsson's catalogues cover only printed music, yet neither of these includes all the printed music in the Finspong collection.⁵³ Jan Olof Rudén's catalogue includes only music in tablature.⁵⁴ The most comprehensive modern catalogue, Répertoire International des ⁵⁴ Rudén, Music in Tablature.

Sources Musicales (RISM 2001), which includes music both in manuscript and in print, does not cover liturgical music and hymns.⁵⁵

Nineteen printed writings about music in the Finspong collection have also been included in the present catalogue. Many of them are contained in Davidsson's catalogue of printed music theory from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in Swedish libraries.⁵⁶ Some of the Finspong collection copies seemingly escaped Davidsson, among them the copies of Athanasius Kircher's Musurgia universalis (Rome, 1650) and Marin Mersenne's Harmonicorum libri XII (Paris, 1648).

The spellings of composers' names and titles have been normalized, first, according to dictionaries, such as Grove Music Online, second, according to catalogues (e.g. RISM and the general catalogue of the French Bibliothèque Nationale) and, third, after consulting the secondary literature. An index of the names of composers, arrangers and compilers is included at the end of the catalogue.

1. Printed Publications with Music

The following section lists all printed publications in the Finspong collection that contain notated music. Editions with a year of publication from before 1750 are listed with full title, format and number of pages. When transcribing the titles the difference between lower- and upper-case letter and the punctuation marks are kept as in the original. The letters of ligatures are divided. The given number of pages reflects the actual number, regardless of any original pagination. Paratexts, such as dedications and prefaces, are indicated, but not reproduced in full, since these can often be found in existing catalogues. For editions with a year of publication after 1750 only basic bibliographical details are included.

2. Music Manuscripts

The following section lists the manuscript volumes in the Finspong collection; the contents of each manuscript are presented in the order in which the pieces appear in the manuscript. The spellings of the titles, first text lines and composers' names are standardized according to modern use, in order to facilitate search. For Dutch traditional tunes, the titles have been normalized according to Nederlandse Liederbank, when possible.⁶³ Additional headings, such as "Air à boire" or the title of a printed collection from which the piece was copied, have been omitted. Concordant printed publications are marked by their RISM number: RISM A/I (single-author publications), RISM B/I (anthologies, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries), and RISM B/II (anthologies, eighteenth century). Movements from the stage works by Jean-Baptiste Lully are supplied with their LWV numbers taken from Herbert Schneider's Lully-Werke-Verzeichnis. In general, only the first known printed concordance is given. In a few cases, subsequent editions are entered in square brackets. A composer's name in square brackets indicates that this attribution is suggested by a concordant manuscript source. All the concordant printed publications referred to in this catalogue are listed at the end of this section, where their full titles are given.

Et vous songes charmants
Sur cette charmante rive	RISM B/II, p. 315 (1724)

Que ferons-nous pour avoir
Belle Iris quand vous prenez
Quand le courroux du ciel
C'est dans ces lieux où règne
Tous les vents
Iris est sensible à mes feux
L'Ouvrage / À ne plus aimer
Au dieu d'amour nuit et jour
Pour goûter du plaisir
Tandis que l'onde errante coule
Des grandeurs la suite importune
Sans songer au fatal moment
Grands dieux qu'ils sont heureux
Je me pâme mon cher Tircis
Veux-tu me voir mourir
Venez tous venez faire emplette
Hier Catin me demanda
Vaste mer dont le calme perfide
Un petit doigt de ce bon vin
Pardonnez chers amis
L'autre jour un carme gaillard
Importuns habitants d'un bois
Non jamais de liberté
En vous disant adieu
Tendre amour chacun te fait
Longue et fâcheuse nuit
Ciel qu'est-ce que je vois
Pourquoi vous mettre
Grégoire revenant de boire
Plainte / Hélas c'est trop chanter
Sans Bacchus dans la vie
Ah que le sort des morts
Vous êtes satisfait
Volez charmantes fleurs
Quel spectacle enchanteur
Êtes-vous l'aimable reine
Chantez ma musette
Être à table près d'un objet
Quel caprice quelle injustice
En vain pour oublier
Jus aimable tu guéris
Ruisseau combien de fois
Non volage me plus
Coulez brillez charmant vin
Doux charme de la vie bouteille
Quand frère Nicolas revenant
Après le malheur effroyable
O temps heureux où la terre
